DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The building is three bays wide and three stories high. The first story center bay facade is punctuated by centered, flat double doors surmounted by a flat transom of two lights. The door is flanked to either side by two flat plate glass store windows, each of one light. The two outer bays are each punctuated by flat double light plate glass windows with accompanying two light, flat transoms.

The 2nd and 3rd story facades are of concrete articulated by seven accordia type pleats. The store name is carried by this wall in large letters. The roof is flat.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The building dates from c.1860, and even though none of the original facade is visible, its replacement is architecturally significant as an indicator of the building's continuing use, as a clear example of the commercial style of architecture of the late 1950's, and as one of the newer facades that complements the scale of the Lexington Market.
